Abstract

Journalism could be a tool to produce news stories bombastically. Bombastic news on the bad reality could be produce bad things. In order not to make journalism producing bad things, we have to have some principles in reporting the bad realities. The article suggests one principle: to present bad reality as the way it is. The practice of this principle is not so difficult since the fact has shown that the Indonesian press has been made public sphere on bad realities successfully. However, in practicing this principle, the journalists still place their selves as doers in profession and doers in media.

Key words:

Bad news, bombastic journalism, direct journalism, public sphere
